

A silhouette illustration of three camels and their riders, likely representing the Three Kings, walking up a hill against a deep blue night sky. The sky is filled with numerous stars, including a prominent bright star with a long tail in the upper left corner. The camels are in profile, moving from left to right, with the lead camel being the largest and the two following camels being progressively smaller. Each camel has a rider on its back, and the lead camel appears to carry gifts. The overall style is simple and evocative, using black silhouettes against a vibrant blue background.
